Regional Summary of Week 30

- 1) Recorded events in Week 30 are still largely hydro-meteorological in nature due to monsoon low and extending effect of Tropical Storm Son-Tinh, including a collapsed dam in Lao PDR. The effect is extending beyond Lao PDR with floods reported in Stung-Treng Province, Cambodia, and raised flood alert in northern Thailand.
- 2) A strong M 6.4 Earthquake occurred on 29 July 2018 05.47 hrs (UTC +7), with epicenter at a depth of 24 km and located at 8.4 S & 116.5 E in Lombok Island, Indonesia (BMKG). No tsunami generated by this event, until 29 July 2018, 22:00 (UTC +7), 213 aftershocks were recorded (BMKG), and a landslide was observed in Mount Rinjani. In Philippines, there were 6 moderate earthquake with magnitude  $\geq$  M 4.0 in this week, no casualties or damaged reported (PHIVOLCS).
- 3) There is no changes in alert level of volcanoes across ASEAN. In Indonesia, Mount Sinabung (Alert Level IV), Mount Agung (Alert Level III), and 18 others with Alert Level II (PVMBG). In Philippines, Mount Mayon and Mount Kanlaon remain at Alert Level II (PHIVOLCS).

Outlook for Week 31

- 1) According to ASEAN Specialised Meteorological Centre (ASMC), Wet weather conditions continue to affect most parts of northern ASEAN region while the southern ASEAN region remained generally dry. Isolated hotspots with localised smoke plumes were detected in parts of Kalimantan and Sumatra. For the next few days, prevailing winds in the region are forecast to blow from the southeast or southwest.
- 2) AHA Centre is continuing emergency response to floods in Lao PDR, which resulted from TS Son-Tinh and the collapsed of Xe Pien and Xe Nam Noy Dam in Attapeu Province.
- 3) AHA Centre is in close contact with Government of Myanmar, through Department of Disaster Management, regarding the flood situation.
- 4) AHA Centre is in close contact with Government of Indonesia, through National Disaster Management Authority (BNPB), on the M 6.4 Lombok Earthquake. Based on the current information, there is no indication that international assistance will be requested or welcomed.
- 5) The remaining disasters occurred in Week 30 were within the capacity of respective ASEAN Member States.
